

Abstract

A system for managing a plurality of client processes, comprising a client task within which the client processes will be executed and a manager task running at a higher priority than the client task, the manager task queuing the client processes into the client task in priority order, wherein 5 the manager task kills the client task when a current one of the client processes is not completed within a predetermined time period.